

Virtual Officing Resources

Since April 2011, GSA no longer has financial affiliation with the former Telework Centers; i.e., GSA discontinued sponsorship of the original 14 telework centers in the Washington Metropolitan area. However, the George Mason University (GMU) program continues operation of Telework Centers in Virginia, and there are other private sector telework centers, or 'hoteling,' arrangements, available from private entities listed below. Please note the caveat that these are private sector solutions; hence, we are not allowed to endorse any of them and have no knowledge of their suitability. We simply share the information to assist you. Regarding Federal agency policy updates, it is suggested that Agencies remove any references to TFRS, TOLBS, and GSA, but retain 'telework center' as an 'alternative workplace arrangement.'

Telework Centers provide space, similar to hoteling arrangements, plus some offer conference rooms and training facilities for short meetings/classes, on a for fee basis. These alternative workplaces are useful types of facilities for remote, home-based worker, and for the field work force to meet or convene.
